Understanding Cirrhosis and Liver Cancer Risk

Many people do not realize the strong connection between cirrhosis and liver cancer risk. Cirrhosis develops when the liver is damaged over the course of many years. Healthy liver tissue is replaced with scar tissue by the liver as a result of infection, alcohol use, or fatty liver disease. Over time, cirrhosis becomes increasingly significant as the body is not able to function adequately to maintain a person's health cirrhosis can lead to liver cancer.

At IOCI Kanpur, liver specialists prioritize early detection, diagnosis, and prevention. With advanced imaging, blood tests, and screening programs, liver disease can be diagnosed before it causes life-threatening illness.

For patients already diagnosed with liver cancer, the latest treatment regimens are offered for consideration; immunotherapy, targeted therapy, and surgical care is always the plan based on the patient's needs. IOCI Kanpur liver experts remind every patient, 'early detection is key for a live-saving treatment protocol, and with every plan there is always hope for recovery.
